TOTAL SOLAR ECLIPSE

Argentina’s Patagonian Lake District

December 8–18, 2020

WITH Jean-Luc Margot
Professor of Earth, Planetary, and Space Sciences at UCLA
DEAR UCLA ALUMNI AND FRIENDS

On December 14, 2020, join UCLA alumni and friends to witness a rare cosmic event—a total solar eclipse in Argentina’s Patagonian Lake District known for its sapphire lakes, lush forests and sensational views of the snow-capped Andes. In the company of Jean-Luc Margot, Professor of Earth, Planetary, and Space Sciences, we’ll experience the eclipse during the southern hemisphere’s summer at a site outside San Martin de los Andes directly along the path of the totality.

Enjoy a full-day tour to some of Buenos Aires’ famous barrios (neighborhoods) and an evening tango performance. Beyond Argentina’s cosmopolitan capital, venture south to San Carlos de Bariloche, the gateway to Patagonia and headquarters for Nahuel Huapi National Park, Argentina’s oldest national park. Sail across Lake Nahuel Huapi’s crystal-clear waters for a picnic lunch on Victoria Island. Journey on to San Martin de los Andes via the famed Road of the Seven Lakes. On eclipse day, arrive at our viewing site located close to the center-line of the eclipse with an onsite buffet lunch and time to prepare for this extraordinary event. After the eclipse, explore Lanín National Park named after the imposing Lanín Volcano and noted for its forests of ancient Araucaria trees. On the return enjoy a day in Buenos Aires where we’ll tour the Colón Opera House followed by a festive farewell lunch.

Space for this program has already begun to fill quickly, so call today to secure your place on a unique tour to witness a solar eclipse in Argentina’s spectacular Patagonian Lake District.
